St. Paul Should be Called City of Brotherly Love

Brotherly Love. But the author, or authors, of this tender phrase evidently had never heard of St. Paul, Minn. It is really the latter city which should bear the affectionate title. The reasons are herewith appended:

They were easily identified by their baleness. But they could fight, and were hefore the mobile of the mob

St. Paul, Minn., harbors two pairs of before the public for many years. St. Paul, Minn., harbors two pairs of brothers who have made their mark in puglism. One of each pair is generally accredited with being the champion in his respective division, while the other brother of each is close to the top in the same class. And here is where brotherily love comes in. The near-champion in each inetance wishes it to be universally known that his brother is his superior.

before the public for many years.

George and Jimmy Gardner were leading weiter-weight. Jimmy, at one time, held the championship in that division. Another prominent pair of brotheris in the weiter-weight class were Mike and Billy Glover. The latter is still doing some good work in the ring, while Mike is proprietor of a gymnasium.
